Dear Shirley,

It was good to see you being featured in yesterday's Sunday Herald. Scottish readership continually needs to be reminded of your case.

My wife and I would want to assure you of our continued support for you, and firmly believe that good will overcome evil and truth will prevail. Do not lose sight of that but continue to believe that you will be vindicated.

Vicky Allan in her article quotes you, "I'm not religious, but I prayed — to whoever, anybody." That remark warmed my heart because you realise that there is a Power beyond ourselves in whom we can trust, and into whose care, we can totally submit every part of our lives. For that reason I am enclosing a Gideon New Testament & Psalms. We are members of the Gideon association, and in the placing of these Bibles in many, many locations, numerous reports have come back to us, telling of how the person had been directed to just the right words at a crucial time in their life. That being the case, could I ask you to look at page 4 and see some of the references given because I believe you will find the strength to keep going despite all the set-backs.

We look forward to the day when TRUTH will be acknowledged in your situation and you will be recognized for the stand you have taken.

With every good wish.

Yours sincerely, **
