

Scottish Justice

The 'World's End Murders' trial fiasco has prompted further debate on the state of the Scottish Justice system and in particular the Crown Office

As usual the article by Ian Bell in the Herald is particularly insightful.

<http://www.theherald.co.uk/features/featuresopinon/display.var.1681555.0.0.php>

John Robertson and Michael Howie in the Scotsman provide an in-depth analysis of the trial and its players.

<http://thescotsman.scotsman.com/index.cfm?id=1461912007>

In the Herald reader Paul McConville takes time out from a flying visit to this planet to pen some memorable opinions in the letters page of the Herald.

<http://www.theherald.co.uk/features/letters/display.var.1684710.0.0.php>

In the same paper Calum MacDonald reports on the issue of non-disclosure of evidence by the prosecution.

<http://theherald.co.uk/news/news/display.var.1684806.0.0.php>