Electronic index

From the middle of April, in an innovative move, this site will alter its structure and become an electronic index for 'The Price of Innocence'.

Information on all persons, publications and documents referred to in the book will be accessible via this website.

Effectively the site will represent one of the most comprehensive archives ever published online and will be extremely useful to students and those wanting a more in-depth knowledge of the issues that have driven this case for 10 years.

Readers will be able to view copies of all correspondence, reports, minutes of meetings, journals, media reports and TV programmes referred to in the book and new material will be added as it becomes available.

The site will be interactive with the authors happy to correspond with readers on any relevant issues.
